COMPANY PROFILE

Accés is an enterprise established in 1992 by the City Council of Lleida, Catalonia, the North East of Spain. It has two objectives: to improve the internal management and internal functions of the council through new technologies and, secondly, to provide advances in the Information Society for Lleida's citizens and businesses.

Among the main project carried out by Accés is the extension of a 50km optical fibre network, an investment of more than €35 million, whilst simultaneously improving the urbanisation and town planning.

In the area of software development, Accés creates applications and projects for both the town hall and the Catalonia's regional government. These applications are for the environment in collaboration with other administrative companies, enterprises and organisations involved in local, regional and central administration.

In the field of business development and promotion, Accés through the Lleida@tech project provides a quality brand to promote initiatives in the ICT sector. It finds funding and financing for projects, activities such as attending fairs and conferences, and it builds links with universities or enterprises within the Agri-Food Scientific and Technological Park in Lleida.
